

Greggs Marketing Teardown: Local Search and App Growth

Greggs' physical network creates strong local search intent, while the app is positioned as the retention mechanism. The outside-in question is whether the moment someone finds a shop is also used as the moment to earn a repeat customer.

SCOPE Public sources checked on 23 September 2026. No claim is made about revenue, customer data, campaign performance or internal strategy.

THE WIDER LESSON

High-intent local search should solve today's need and create a reason to return tomorrow.

What is publicly visible

OBSERVED 01

The physical network creates strong local intent

Customers can interact through shops, delivery, partnerships and Click and Collect. Searches for nearby shops, opening times and menus sit close to a purchase decision.

OBSERVED 02

The app is central to repeat relationships

Greggs publicly describes its app and CRM as tools for loyalty and long-term customer connection. Rewards and digital ordering provide a route beyond the one-off visit.

What the evidence may mean — and what would disprove it

POSSIBLE IMPLICATION

The local answer can also be the retention moment

Someone finding a shop has already shown location, timing and product intent. The opportunity is to solve that task first, then offer one proportionate reason to use the app next time.

ALTERNATIVE EXPLANATION

A credible reason the signal may be benign

Local listings, app campaigns and paid media may already connect these journeys effectively. Corporate pages describe the strategy but do not expose channel-level conversion or app attribution.

THE SMALLEST USEFUL TEST

Learn before committing to a larger fix

On selected local landing journeys, test a nearest-shop answer followed by one relevant app benefit, such as ordering ahead or a reward. Measure direction requests, orders and later app activity.

What I would check internally

- 1 Which local searches most reliably precede a shop visit or order?
- 2 Do store-finder users receive an appropriate app reason after completing their task?
- 3 Can online and in-shop behaviour be reconciled without overstating attribution?
- 4 Which app benefits create repeat use rather than one-off incentive redemption?
