

SHA Wellness Marketing Teardown: Programme Choice and Trust

SHA presents a premium health journey across Spain, Mexico and the Emirates. Its English-language site combines longevity and healthspan programmes with specialised packs covering areas such as sleep, gut health, cognitive performance and smoking cessation. The outside-in question is not clinical efficacy. It is whether a prospective guest can identify the right next conversation without first understanding the entire programme architecture.

SCOPE Public sources only. No access to revenue, campaign, customer or internal strategy data. Observations reviewed on 23 September 2026; hypotheses require internal validation.

THE WIDER LESSON

In a high-consideration health journey, clarity should guide the consultation without pretending to replace it.

What is publicly visible

OBSERVED 01

Programme choice is organised through several layers

Public pages group offers under Longevity, Healthspan and Personalised programmes, then add specialised packs for specific goals. The site also presents locations, medical expertise, diagnostics, accommodation and results content.

OBSERVED 02

Human advisers are the explicit bridge when choice is difficult

SHA asks visitors who are unsure which programme suits them to contact Health Journey Advisors. That is an appropriate high-touch route, particularly where personal health information and suitability need careful handling.

What the evidence may mean — and what would disprove it

POSSIBLE IMPLICATION

The quality of the enquiry brief may shape the entire experience

A prospect may recognise a goal such as sleep, stress or performance without knowing whether to choose a programme, pack or location. A clearer non-diagnostic orientation step could improve confidence and give advisers a more useful starting point.

ALTERNATIVE EXPLANATION

A credible reason the signal may be benign

Deliberate complexity may reinforce the personalised nature of the service and discourage self-diagnosis. SHA's advisers may already use an effective private qualification process that cannot be assessed through public pages.

THE SMALLEST USEFUL TEST

Learn before committing to a larger fix

Test a non-diagnostic journey planner that asks about goals, preferred location, timing and desired level of support, then prepares questions for an adviser rather than recommending treatment. Measure enquiry completion, adviser readiness and unsuitable enquiry rates.

What I would check internally

- 1 Which programme names and medical terms require the most clarification before enquiry?
- 2 Do prospects begin with a health goal, a programme name or a preferred location?
- 3 What information helps advisers prepare without collecting unnecessary health data?
- 4 Can trust content answer common concerns before a guest enters a private consultation?
